

365 suite of tools is truly phenomenal for solving many of your pressing business issues. Today, our biggest challenges center on communication, collaboration, accountability, organization, and way too many meetings. Microsoft 365 helps us move away from email as the primary tool for managing our work and provides apps that were uniquely designed to help us in this highly collaborative business environment. Google is working hard to keep up, but it doesn't have as much integration and isn't as robust of a solution as Microsoft's offerings for business clients, in my humble opinion. That said, Google apps do play well with other software through partnerships with companies like Slack, Asana, Todoist, etc., which allows them to address many of the same issues.

Before we dive into some of the integrated features that help drive team productivity, let me give you some context as to why these features have become so valuable. For
